b. On 6 November, [REDACTED] joined other members of the Statement of Requirements Working Group (SORWG) to further modify the group's strawman Statement of Requirements (SOR) for the development of a family of federal standards for automated high frequency radios. The first standard under consideration is Automatic Link Establishment (ALE) which is the capability of an HF radio station to initiate a circuit between itself and another specified radio station without operator assistance, usually under processor control, and featuring techniques for automatic signalling, selective calling, and automatic handshaking.
